ISSUE CARDS

Boy Child Sexual Abuse  There is a lot of data to back up the fact that boy children are equally vulnerable to sexual abuse. But parents live with the misconception that their boys are safe and focus only on protecting girls from sexual crimes.	Bullying  Some children face a lot of bullying by their peers. In schools, in neighborhoods, and online, children are put through emotional and physical abuse because of their appearance, economic class, or disability, among other reasons.	Families Treat Boys Better Than Girls  In some homes, boys are treated better than girls. Girls are asked to do all the chores at home and limit their own educational goals. Girls are also not given the same support for sports or play.
Child Participation  Children have the freedom to express their opinions and to have a say in matters affecting their life. This right is difficult to attain as children are not always encouraged to speak up or listened to by adults.	Parents and Guardians  Since parents/guardians give children an identity, protect them, feed them, and provide education, having a parent/guardian is the most important right a child can have. But there are some who abuse or neglect their children.	Drinking and Driving  The chance of an accident doubles with just two alcoholic drinks. Many lives are put at risk by drinking and driving.
Road Rage  We may angry with people while driving, believing others are bad drivers and we are very good. We get angry when they jump the signal, change lanes, go fast, go slow and other reasons. We expect the best behavior from everyone but ourselves.	Children Losing Interest in Education  Some children find school boring. These children would rather roam around in their neighborhood or hang out with friends than go to school.	Mobile Danger  Some parents buy a mobile phone for their children at an early age. There is a huge risk of children falling prey to people who could abuse them, expose them to pornography, or even traffic them.
Comparing One Another  Children compare what their parents can afford for them with what other parents buy for their children. Some parents compare children to others and tell them to be like those "good children."	Loneliness  This generation is one of loneliest generations in history. Young people have become more isolated, and don't know where to find relationships. This can lead to depression, isolation, unhappiness, and even suicide.	Danger of the Familiar  Past cases of sexual violence and abuse show that the perpetrators are usually people that the victim already knows like family and friends. But this is also the reason why parents find it difficult to confront the abusers; and victims to file a report.
