

5.6.b

Approaches to Peace

Peacekeeping - ending direct violence (focuses on ending the physical violence).

Peacemaking – changing attitudes through dialogue and mediated negotiations. Looks into addressing cultural violence.

Peacebuilding - structural transformation of the conflict's root causes, which come from political, economic, and social spheres.

Just Peace - is built upon three pillars:

- a process and structure of human relationships using justice (courts, laws, and governments)
- communities that actively responds to conflict by nonviolent means
- a system that is permanent and long lasting

True Peace - a participatory nonviolent process that aims to prevent any form of violence, embraces respect for human rights, and helps nonviolent human interaction continue.