

ANNUAL PROGRESS REPORT

October 2021 – September 2022 | India

In the Indian states of Assam and West Bengal, children face high risk of violence and exploitation. But with your support, communities are transforming into safer, more loving places for children.

ASSAM

This year, we reached 171,093 people in Assam. We went both wide and deep—reaching 114,322 people through awareness events (a critical first step for long-term change). And we went deep with individual support for survivors, handling 125 cases of trafficking, rape, child marriage, and other forms of violence. Thank you for equipping us to reach so many.

Girl Power Groups (GPGs) display girls' potential. We now have 254 active GPGs, with more than 9,000 members learning about self-confidence, safety, and how to raise their voices for change. Of those, 1,621 girls joined our soccer program. Seeing girls play soccer challenges community perceptions about what girls can do—the girls' team that won the tournament we hosted went on to place third in the interdistrict tournament! Also this year:

- 386 girls became Anti-Trafficking Warriors after in-depth violence prevention training. (Watch Koyal share how she stops child marriage.)
- GPGs put on street plays to create awareness about child sex trafficking, reaching 26,050 people.

Men Care Groups (MCGs) teach men the value of supporting their wives and daughters. In FY22, we reached 125 MCGs with 4,157 members learning why and how to advocate for women and influence other men to do the same. Also this year:

- 515 MCG members took legal awareness training to report cases of violence against children.
- 125 men developed action plans to stop sexual and gender-based violence. These community-driven plans are key to sustainability.

PROGRESS ON CORE ACTIVITIES (ASSAM)

9,349 members of GPGs trained on life and protection skills

1,321 faith leaders trained in the Channels of Hope for Child Protection curriculum

129,634 community members educated to prevent trafficking and promote safe migration (FY22 target not met due to challenges from flooding and ongoing COVID-19 restrictions)

INDIA

WEST BENGAL

In West Bengal, we reached 96,909 people—from young survivors to government leaders—with tools to stop violence against children.

Child-Friendly Learning and Recreation Centers (CFLRCs) provide a safe place for children at risk to play. This year, 1,179 children participated in our 14 CFLRCs in 10 red-light districts in West Bengal.

- 1,052 children completed our education program to help them catch up to appropriate learning levels after two years of school closures. This will help prevent school dropouts.
- 59 mothers were equipped to start small businesses and 89 women and adolescents received entrepreneurship or job training.
- All CFLRCs hosted meetings for mothers to learn about self-care, women's health, and positive parenting.

Children with disabilities are empowered with resources. Children with disabilities face greater risk of exploitation. A disability certificate can help them obtain promised government support, but certificates are difficult to obtain, and families are sometimes exploited while applying for them. To address this, we held a screening event with relevant officials all in one place, resulting in 334 children obtaining their certificates. Also this year:

- 36 children with hearing impairment received hearing aids, allowing many of them to hear for the first time.
- 53 children received wheelchairs.

Survivors are speaking out to create change. We organized a meeting between survivors, district leaders, and police to provide a space for survivors to advocate directly for their rights regarding promised victim compensation. Some survivors also chose to share with GPGs, using their stories to build awareness among GPG members. Also this year:

- 160 survivors took part in our monthly meetings, which provide mental health support and legal aid.
- 148 child survivors in shelter homes joined our Sports for Development, music, and/or art therapy classes to aid in their recovery.

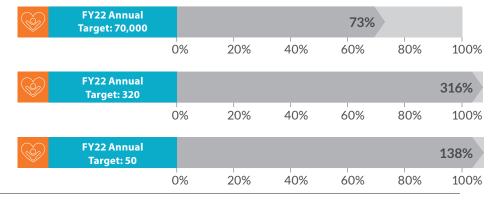

Girls display reminders of their great value in God's eyes. This year, CFLRCs hosted a special psychosocial support program for 259 girls with the theme, "I am God's Masterpiece." They learned that they are valued and loved by God no matter where they live, what they look like, or what their parents are involved in.

PROGRESS ON CORE ACTIVITIES (WEST BENGAL)

50,843 community members educated to prevent trafficking and promote safe migration

1,011 child survivors provided with mental health and psychosocial support

69 families trained in the Celebrating Families curriculum to help them heal broken relationships and better care for each other

PROGRESS AND PARTNERSHIPS

Partnering with multifaith leaders

In both Assam and West Bengal, investing in partnerships with multifaith leaders has led to significant community-driven change. This year in Assam, 298 multifaith leaders took part in Congregational Hope Action Teams, in which they took steps to protect children, independent of World Vision support. In West Bengal, 50 Muslim faith leaders took Channels of Hope for Child Protection training, and we partnered with 200 Hindu priests to put on a Faith in Action awareness campaign about the harms of child marriage and sex trafficking, which reached 18,200 people.

Growing relationships with police departments

We are also seeing our investments in relationships with police departments in both states start to pay off. Over time, we have helped create more positive perceptions of police and, in turn, equipped the police to better protect children, especially girls. In West Bengal, police departments have invited World Vision to be part of rescue missions because of the expertise we've demonstrated. In Assam this year, 1,193 GPG members joined police interface meetings, and many girls have expressed hopes of becoming police officers someday to help protect their communities. This shows a big shift from when we started, when both groups viewed the other with much more suspicion.

Please join with us in prayer as we continue to rely on supportive partnerships. Pray that those in power will be motivated by compassion for children facing violence.
