

On a local level?

- Find out about the services for children and young people in your area. Do children have equal rights to education? Health care?
- Volunteer to work with a local organization that provides services to children, especially children who are at-risk due to homelessness or other obstacles.
- Take part in local action, like organizing a food drive, or planning clean-up days for a park.
- Write to a local newspaper to express your ideas about the rights of a child.

On a national level?

- Find out who in your government has responsibility for seeing that the Conventions of Rights is implemented.
- Join World Vision Advocacy and find a child-focused issue and advocate by contacting your elected leader through the website or by calling. worldvision.org/advocacy
- Contact a UNICEF office to find out how you can participate in the promotion of children's rights.

On a global level?

- Learn about places in your part of the world and in other countries where children's rights are not followed.
- Join an international human rights organization; again World Vision Advocacy is a good option for going deeper.
- Express your opinions: avoid buying products from companies that use child labor, pollute the environment, etc.
- Discern where your clothes come from, as clothing production is one leading area of manufacturing that employs slaves. You can research brands here: <https://baptistworldaid.org.au/resources/2019-ethical-fashion-guide/>.
